GLOBAL NEWS

- Forward Keys data for the period until April 19, 2020 was released yesterday:
 1. Air travel fell to exactly half of the volume in 2019
 2. Cancellations peaked in mid-March
 3. Global seat capacity fell from over 40 million seats in operation to less than 10 % of that today.
 4. The good news, despite evaporation of demand, flight search data reveals that consumers are still dreaming about travel.
 5. YTY drop in travel with over 90 % of all flights currently grounded, the YTY data trend is set to continue to deteriorate:
 - Asia Pacific saw the worst drop-off at 56,1 %
 - Europe is down 50,2 %
 - Africa and Middle East is down 42,6 %
 - Americas is down 39,8 %
- Flight bookings are down 86,8 % compared to the first 15 weeks of 2019. (Bookings from Asia Pacific are down by more than 100 % - so new bookings were outweighed by cancellations. It then continues to mention the rest of the areas - Africa and Middle East down by 71,4 %.) March has seen effectively no new bookings with a wave of cancellations and that pattern continued into April.
- Consumers are still researching foreign travel and have a disproportionate interest in long haul travel in the third and the fourth quarters of the years. Countries researched include France, Italy, Japan, Spain and South Korea.
